PREFACE

"WHO'S WHO in American Medicine" is offered to the general and professional public, which has given evidence of hearty interest in it, with the conviction that a valuable and commendable work has been completed and that an institution in reference works has been established.

Its beginnings were unusual. It frequently happens that when a definite need exists in any field the desire to have it supplied grows more acute until, after a long period of absolute lack, two or more means will be found simultaneously to meet the situation. Such a condition came about in the preparation of a "Who's Who" that should serve the general public, American physicians and surgeons, and institutions and organizations. Dr. Loyd Thompson, M. D., F. A. C. P., of Hot Springs National Park, Arkansas, formed the National Park Publishing Company and began work upon the compilation of "Who's Who in American Medicine." At the same time Who's Who Publications, Inc., of New York, inaugurated a volume of the same plan and purpose. Soon afterward the two works were merged and Who's Who Publications, Inc., continued the preparation of the volume under the joint editorship of Dr. Thompson and Winfield Scott Downs.

Who's Who Publications, Inc., are publishers of "Who's Who in New York," the eighth edition of which appeared in 1924, and "Who's Who in Engineering," 1925, and the enthusiastic welcome accorded these volumes formed the basis of the public confidence in the present work. There have been two guiding rules in the preparation of this book,—careful selection and the observance of the strictest possible ethical standards. Following these came the striving for accuracy and the production of a well-appearing volume. The publishers will be appreciative of memoranda correcting errors, for the improvement of future editions. A wide variety of handwriting and failure to return in corrected form the copy submitted were contributing factors toward editorial difficulty.

There is no paid material in this volume.

In those cases where eligible names sought are not found the explanation of the omission is probably that the requested data were not supplied by the individuals. We have asked and now seek the co-operation of the profession toward the inclusion of any outstanding physicians and surgeons whose names are missing from the following pages. The same applies to institutions.

It is believed that an especially interesting and valuable feature is the department of the volume containing the hospital directory and the staffs of these institutions. This directory has been compiled through direct correspondence, in the manner employed for securing the personal data contained herein, and for this reason constitutes an accurate and dependable source of reference.

With the consciousness of a difficult task completed in accordance with high standards and in harmony with the ethics of a splendid calling, this volume is placed in the hands of the public.

Medical Research; b. Manitowoc, Wis., July 20, 1874; s. Henry Coakley, M. D., and Deborah (Wardell) Coakley; ed. Manitowoc, Wis., Grammar Sch.; Wheatland, N. D., Grammar Sch.; Los Angeles, Calif., Grammar Sch.; Los Angeles High Sch., St. Vincent's Coll., Los Angeles; Ontario Coll., Ontario, Calif.; Marquette Univ., M. D., 1898; attended clinics abroad; license, Wis., 1898; Illinois, 1899; practiced in Chicago, Ill., 1898-1904. Interne, Trinity Hosp. of Milwaukee, during the last year in coll. Began research work in Los Angeles, Calif., in 1891. Conducted a pvt. research lab. in Chicago from 1898 to 1904. Worked in the research labs. of Med. Dept., Cornell Univ., summer, 1904; Hudson St. Hosp., N. Y. C., 1904-08. Maintained pvt. research lab., N. Y. City many years. Originated the transplantation of organs work while a student of the Coroner of Los Angeles, Calif., in 1891. Conceived the idea of treating the organs of the body locally in 1896 (showed that it was possible to make hypodermic injections in the heart, liver, lungs, spleen, etc.). Described a pathognomic eye sympton in rabies in July, 1907. Worked out two methods of removing bile for exam. without doing any cutting in 1907. Found a new disease in the lower animals in 1906. In 1906, found two diseases in the dog and cat that had not been described—(Otitis Media and Mastoiditis). Made the observation in 1898 that organless cold-blooded animals could be kept alive in a perfect vacuum for several hrs. In 1899 conceived the idea of treating the aorta and the organs of the body thru the blood vessels and invented an elec. lighted instrument called the cardioscope which makes med. and surg. interference on the interior of the aorta, heart, and some of the other organs possible. In 1901 originated the work now known as bleeding and infusing. The sodium salt causes hemoglobin displaced by the co-2 to be returned to the cells. Bleeding raises the color index. In 1901 started toward organization the Internat. Congress for the Discussion of Original Anonymous Communications in Medicine, Surgery, Sociology and Economics. Founder of Coakley's Archives. Made the transplantation of organs work known for the first time at the K. K. Allgemeines Hosp., and read a paper on the local treatment of the organs work before the Medizinische Club, Vienna, on invitation of the late Prof. Nothnagel. Demonstrated the local treatment of the organs work on animals at the K. K. Allgemeines Hosp., October, 1901. Coll. de France, Paris, 1901.* Read a paper before the Soc. de Biology, Paris, 1901, on invitation of the late Prof. Eli Metchnikoff and Prof. Hallion. Univ. Coll., London, 1901.* Krankenhaus Mobit, Berlin, 1901.* Read a paper before the 14th Internat. Med. Cong., Madrid, on invitation of the late Prof. Rudolph Virchow, 1903.
